... A voice for a healthy future

“Behavioral health is more than mental health and substance use...it is looking at the whole person – where they are and where [and how] they can thrive.”

–Steven Nikolsky, Manager of Clinical Social Workers, South Shore Health System
Department of Behavioral Health and Presenter at Greater Brockton Health Alliance
November 2017 Meeting

The Greater Brockton Health Alliance is “looking at the whole person” in the context of the following areas (including but not limited to): social determinants of health (education, housing, income and transportation), cultural competencies, early intervention and prevention, and physical and social environment (stigma, cultural barriers).
